RELIGION & SCIENCE The Best of Enemies - The Worst of Friends

All members and interested others are invited to attend a series of programs which will ask the questions: What is religion? What is science? The programs will explore the contributions that religion and science have made and continue to make to society. They will examine the ethical challenges posed by advances in science and technology and ask: Can religion and science co-exist in an intellectually supportive and nurturing environment? If so, what are some of the ways each can help humankind understand and use science and technology wisely?

Dialogue is the vehicle for exploring the differing ways in which reasonable people think, feel and believe. It is therefore, a way of listening to the many voices who discuss and examine these differing views in an attempt to learn to live together cooperatively as we move into the next century.

Please mark your calendars or post the enclosed schedule in a conspicuous place so that you won't miss a single one of these informative and provocative lectures and discussions. We encourage each of you to join us at the University of South Alabama Medical School Auditorium for the first of this series on April 3, 1997 at 7:00 PM. Please see the schedule for details on this and other subsequent programs.

Shalom,
